Leonard Zeskind is an internationally recognized expert on the history of the white supremacist movement as it’s evolved over the last three-plus decades. He ties together seemingly disparate strands—from neo-Nazi skinheads, to Holocaust deniers, to David Duke, to the militia and beyond. Zeskind shows how factions have evolved into a normative social movement that looks like a demographic slice of white America, mostly blue-collar and working middle class, with lawyers and PhDs among their leaders.

Leonard Zeskind —author of
"Hidden, Forgotten and Denied: Racism and Anti-Semitism in the State of Kansas"

3:30 PM • Monday, January 28th
Henderson Hall, Rm. 208, Washburn University

This presentation is free and open to the public. Refreshments will be served.

Leonard Zeskind has written on the radical right for such publications as The New York Times, the Los Angeles Times, The American Prospect, The Nation, Rolling Stone, and The Forward. His honors include a MacArthur Fellowship, a Petra Foundation Fellowship, the Paul H. Tobenkin Prize, and the Bayard Rustin Award. He has testified before a Parliamentary Subcommittee in the United Kingdom, given public lectures at universities in London and Berlin, and worked for more than three decades to curb the influence of racism, anti-Semitism and white supremacist groups in the United States. He is a lifetime member of the NAACP, and has served on the board of directors of the Petra Foundation and the Kansas City Jewish Community Relations Bureau. He is president of the Institute for Research & Education on Human Rights (IREHR). He is an internationally recognized expert on the history of the white supremacist movement as it’s evolved over the last three-plus decades, and had his book on the subject published in 2009.